

In detail

In a hurry = Con ers Jo

In particular = En particular

Solution

b connectors are words or expressions that point to a relationship between two sentences.

Example: but - and - although - also - more still - too -

In the same way - adding to the above (on the other hand)

c - Are words of different categories (prepositions, conjunctions, adverbs, verbs) that are not concepts, they are used to join concepts and indicate the type of relationship established between them.

Examples: for, by, where, as, among other

D-Connectors: These are words or groups of words that serve to link ideas by clearly expressing how they are related to each other. Their main function, as their name indicates, is to connect different part of a text, whether they are one word, sentences or even complete paragraphs.

Linking Words: These are words of different categories (prepositions, conjunctions / adverbial verbs) that are not concepts, they are used to join concepts and indicate the type of relationship established between them.